"THE RIGHT TO VOTE"-THE MOST INEFFECTUAL "RIGHT" WE HAVE

Every four years our White Racial Comrades are confronted with the presidential elections to determine which particular Jewish-controlled stooge will sit in the White House. Every four years our people are bamboozled with the propaganda of chronic liars for months on end and told by the Jewish media and duped Whites that they should "exercise their vote" and "choose" between two candidates. Failing that, we are told, if we do not vote, we "have no room to complain." Of course, this presumes that there is really a "choice." The reality, though, is that there isn't a choice in any meaningful sense, for in order to become a Republican or Democratic candidate for president, the person must have already sacrificed the interests of his people for the interests of the Jews. This is hardly a "choice" for which White people should feel guilty for not exercising. It's like choosing between being shot by firing squad or being hanged-neither is particularly "pleasing" and nor should a person confronted with these options think he has much "choice" in the matter.

Not only should we not refrain from complaining, but by complaining, loud and hard, and taking action to end this outrage, this outrage will one day be ended. It is when people are complacent and hope that somehow that things will change for the better, that things remain the same or get worse.

The political process is well screened-any hint of independent and pro-white thought on the part of the candidate spells doom for any high political aspirations in these two parties. Witness Pat Buchanan. Though he was obviously miles away from us in thought and lied about as much as other politicians, he leveled a few attacks on the Jews and made some mildly racist comments concerning the niggers. The result is that even though he received many votes in a number of states in the primaries, when it came time for the Republican convention, he was shut out of it while the mongrel nigger "General" Colin Powell was a featured speaker. The only reason this nigger became a viable "contender" for the White House in the first place is because the Jews through the media made him one and many of our gullible White Racial Comrades bought it. We can expect the Jews to pull some other subservient mongrel out of the woodwork four years from now.

I do not mean to say from the above that Creators should not run for public office. Not at all. Running for public office can get massive publicity for the Church and our Cause and inform people that we can offer responsible government. By winning elections, we will show our people what a pro-White government is like and provide inspiration to other Creators to do the same. Lastly, by running for public office and winning or doing well, we will show our people that our views are legitimate and that we can win-this is very important in itself. There is a definite difference between running for public office as a Creator and voting for a pro-Jew "president."

It must be the position of our Church that Creators only vote for those who by words or deed have convinced us that they are genuinely concerned about the future of our White Race. Then, and only then, will we have a meaningful choice.

Largely, then, the "right to vote" is of little effect. It makes our people think that they have power, when in reality they are simply pawns in the chess game. It hasn't saved our people in the past from our enemies, and nor will it guarantee our people's future. The first and foremost task is to straighten out the thinking of our people, and this can only be done by the fervent preaching of our dynamic religion to our White Racial Comrades. Once this is done, the battle will be as good as over.

Defining Evidence
by Creator Tom Walsh
with additions by Rev. Matt Hale, P.M.

Since it is primarily a Christian concept (and since as an adherent to Creativity I put no stock in 99.9% of their "logic,") that people or inanimate objects can be "evil" is something I would generally be of a mind to scoff at. However, were I of a mind to find common ground with our "Identity" kindred on this concept (I would, of course, be basing my finding on whether or not such was beneficial to our Race), without a doubt the television and those who produce the trash broadcast from it would fit such a title.

In itself, entertaining people on a large scale through technology is not a bad thing, nor do I suppose were the people who originally invented the means to do so, but obviously, waiting in the wings were the opportunists (kikes) with an agenda of destruction who saw this technology as their means for subverting the values, common sense, and the continued aspirations and prosperity of an entire Race, our Race.

Slowly, methodically, the broadcasters substituted the time that we had traditionally spent on building familial bonds and in beneficial activities such as reading, scholarly studies and the like with the mindless distractions of television "entertainment." Once the masses had become accustomed to "tuning in" every night, those with "the agenda" made sure that the masses "tuned out", tuned out to reality.

Content to believe that our lives were as perfect as Fred McMurrays or Mike Bradys, we tuned out the true issues of the day, and while we empathized with Eddie and his father's courtship, the country, or at least a large portion thereof, was stripped out from under our noses. What had begun as a venue for mass entertainment became the means for mass control.

Perhaps even more diabolical than the "sitcoms" and "dramas" have been the well calculated use of the television news media in mishaping the minds of White People. The amount of newsworthy and important events in our world on a daily basis is vast and that which is crammed into a half-hour show (the operable word being "show") is nothing but what those behind the scenes want us to see.

Add to that the recent onslaught of ratings hungry, exploitation heavy talk shows where the producers go out of their way to find the dregs of our society (i.e. race-mixers, cross dressers, etc...) and present them to the masses in an attempt (which has sadly been somewhat successful) to make people think that such unnatural and deviant behavior is not only "acceptable" but the norm-little wonder we have the cracked societal foundation we have today.

So, all things considered, I'd say "evil" is a fitting term in this particular instance. The kikes who've funded and carried out this campaign of subversion through the subconscious of our people could also be appropriately described as "evil."

Am I recommending that everyone smash or sell their sets? No, because as Creators, most of us are already aware of television's insidious influence and are not as susceptible to its influence as are the masses. However, lest our children get caught in the net, we should strictly adhere to a "programming schedule" in our homes that entails only that which is educational, informative, and above all else, racially sound.

Creators Demonstrate Again!

On Tuesday August 13, several Creators, including P.M. Matt Hale, Rev. Jonathan Viktor, Brothers Don Hill, Gary Armstrong, Ray Leoni, Justin Taylor, and Mark Roeder demonstrated at "Four Corners" in East Peoria, some comrades demonstrating as long as three hours. Unlike the demonstration on August 11 (see article on page 6), the media did not cover this event.

Odinism, Friend or Foe? by Creator Tom Walsh

Without any regard to ridiculous biblical forecast, we are truly on the brink of an apocalyptic age in the sense that civilization as we've come to know it will soon end. Just what and whom arises from the ashes of such will be determined by those who, today, are the most adamant in their survival planning. Though most in the white supremacist movement will concede this fact, few are willing to admit our need to rally under one banner and one creed, one that holds the welfare of our folk in veneration above all else. Brother Hayhow recently, and adroitly, showed us precisely how this "Identity" movement is more hindrance than help and now I in turn would like to do the same where Odinism is concerned.

I will not refute Odinism's long tradition, nor will I dispute the fact that it is definitely preferable to the average deity-bound religion. It is not my objective to argue history here either. Any informed racialist knows that Odinism was once a shining star amongst world religions and a sound cultural expression for our folk. The operative words are, however, "was once."

"Once", our Odinst ancestors controlled the seas in wind and oar-powered wooden long boats. Today we do so in titanium-sheathed, nuclear-powered submarines. "Once", our Odinst ancestors cut down their enemies with sword, axe, and spear. Today the arsenals at our disposal enable us to dispatch our foes swiftly and effortlessly. The examples of what was "once" are endless, but the revelation is the same of each: we have progressed technologically, socially, militarily, etc., and yet we are restrained from the realization of our full potential because we have, as a whole, refused to progress religiously.

Some will argue that Odinism is racially sound. To this I say fiddlesticks! While it may have (again) "once" proved conducive to racial adhesiveness, its outmoded and ridiculous superstitions and penchant for placing the attributes of an array of "gods" above those of our Race is nothing but a detriment to our progression and an insult to our intellect. Just how racially (or mentally) "sound" is a doctrine that would give credit for our achievements to "gods" or leave our destiny to the whims of the same? Sound indeed!

No doubt, such an attitude will not endear us to many who foolishly continue to cling to the past, but it is not our task nor is it our concern to become endeared to anyone. Our task and concern lie with the saving of and advancement of our Race and we cannot hope to live up to the latter as long as we continue to humor those who insist on venerating anything other than the White Race.

There was a time when our folk could afford to spend time in the pursuit of "spiritual" endeavors, but that is no longer a luxury to be afforded those who also wish to survive. If we are to be the ones who emerge from the coming apocalypse, then nothing but our folk's survival can be allowed to share space in our minds realm. Culture and tradition are "nice", but they are less than meaningless without a people to express them.

To those Odinsts who find this article, I know you "mean well", but I challenge you to bring your minds to the level of purity that I know your hearts are at. If your love for our folk is as intense as you say, then you'll know we cannot hope to gain a hold on the future while you're stubbornly clinging to the past.

To my fellow Creators, you know the score, but do not give up on those who give credence to outdated doctrines without first attempting to bring them up to date. As those who've attained higher level of understanding, we must simultaneously recognize the Odinst's justifiable desire to see our folk returned to a former glory whilst we enlighten them to the necessity of living in the present, and for the future. RAHOWA!

Hale preaches 'white pride'

By David Rheingold
Times staff writer

EAST PEORIA — Matt Hale took his message of white supremacy to the streets Sunday, where he found a receptive ear among some afternoon commuters.

Hale and two other members of the World Church of the Creator, fresh from church services at a nearby park, waved picket signs and a flag on the sidewalk outside Hardee's on the northwest corner of Main and Washington Streets.

Most drivers simply looked away or ignored the demonstrators. Some stopped to debate

Hale or attempted to block out his message with loud music. Many shouted profanities or made obscene gestures at the group, but an even greater number appeared to wave, cheer or honk their horns in support.

"We're not surprised," said Hale, dressed in a white-collar shirt, red tie and slacks and holding a picket that read "White Pride" on one side and "Race mixing is a sin" on the other.

"A lot of people agree with what we're doing here," he said.

Hale, 25, has rallied support for his cause for the past six years. He ran unsuccessfully for the East Peoria City Council last year, but did receive 546 votes, 13.6 percent of the total number cast.

Hale said he is an ordained minister in the World Church of the Creator, which claims about 20 members locally. They have their own scripture, the "White Man's Bible," and their own flag.

It shows the letter "W," to signify the white race, topped by a crown and halo which the group claims denotes nobility and holiness.

Don Hill held a picket proclaiming "Race is our religion" and "Whites unite."

Hill, 32, of Elmwood, said he came to East Peoria "to stick up for the white race. I'd like to see things change the other way."

He and Hale were joined by Jonathan Viktor, who is staying in East Peoria while he attends Southern Illinois University. A tattoo on his left arm said "Rahowa," a church greeting that means racial holy war, he said.

He also had a swastika tattooed on the inside of his right wrist, and his family's insignia indicating their origin, in Spain's Basque Provinces.

Viktor is originally from northern Spain; his father is German. But he said he does not see a contradiction between his Spanish heritage and his allegiance to the World Church of the Creator.

"I'm really proud to be white and from Spain," he said.

The demonstrators did not face any organized opposition, but a number of passing motorists let their opinions be heard.

White power groups hit area

The Press-Tribune July 21, 1976

By CAROL CRENSHAW
The Press-Tribune

ROSEVILLE — White supremacist groups from neighboring communities have hit the doorsteps of Roseville, spreading their message of racism.

Members of what is called "Church of the Creator" canvassed southeast Roseville June 28, leaving fliers on doorsteps and porches. Residents living on Greensborough, Drive and Crestmont Avenue reported the fliers to police.

On June 13, residents of north Roseville in the Champagne Circle and Reising Way areas also reported finding fliers with white supremacist messages, this time from a Chicago-based group called Western Hammer Skinheads.

Police are taking the appearance of these groups seriously. "We've basically never had any racial problems," said Roseville Police Sgt. Dave Halley. "The residents of Roseville are upset and won't tolerate it."

Covered with crude pictures and messages including "Hitler was right," Halley said, the skinhead fliers clearly denounce people of color.

They call upon "White America".

to stand up, blame the anti-white liberal system for society's ills and claim that the government and political parties have sold out to minorities.

Not officially gangs, these white supremacist groups recruit white males between the ages of 17 to 25 for membership, according to Placer County Sheriff's Deputy Rob Hesse. Most members fit the basic skinhead mold, sporting shaved heads and Doc Marten boots, he said.

When the first fliers appeared, Halley said, it was considered a one-time thing. "Now it has happened twice in less than a month and we are concerned," he said.

The concern is that these groups might plant a seed in Roseville, Halley said. A chapter of the militant Western Hammer Skinheads sprouted a few months ago in Citrus Heights. Members of the group are against all non-white people, but specifically picture African Americans in their fliers.

Originating in Florida, the Church of the Creator (CIC) spread west to Southern California and now to Auburn, where a branch is headed by Northern California director Barley Powell. Another group of CTC members has recently sprung up in Fair Oaks under the direction of the Rev. Greg Dunbar.

Literature distributed by CTC says that its members do not promote violence. Hesse said the Auburn CTC chapter doesn't have a record of resorting to violence, but the Southern California groups do have a history of violence. "They (Auburn CTC members) have the potential for violence," he said. "Just their mere presence has intimidated people."

What members of CTC have done is enter the campuses of Auburn schools trying to recruit members, said Hesse, and now they are banned from school sites.

Calling themselves a church is just a religious cover for the atheist-based CTC, Hesse said. "They don't believe in God. They believe they are right. They are holy in their minds."

According to Hesse, Powell is very charismatic and articulate. He recruits young males easily by persuading them that there would be more jobs and their lives would be better without non-white people, he said.

The CTC speaks of a holy war which will cleanse the land, Hesse said. "They say it has already begun — it is a war of words, a war of ideals and a war of non-violence."

Why are they in Roseville? Hesse said they are here to spread their message because they can. They have not broken the law. Legally, they are protected by the First Amendment and have a right to freedom of speech, Halley said. Unless they actually commit a crime, the police cannot arrest them.

Area police are watching. "These people aren't logical, they aren't religious — they are racists," Hesse said. "Their purpose is to start a holy war."

55, of Creve Coeur, briefly pulled up his motorcycle and blared church music in an attempt to muffle the group's message, although the protesters just thanked him.

"God loves all races, all people," Finley said. "It bothers me to see people with such hate in their hearts. People of other races are just as much my brother as anybody else," he said, inserting a Christian music cassette called "Break Down the Walls" into his dashboard stereo.

He tried to engage Hale in a debate. "How about the 6 million people ...?" Finley asked, referring to the number of Jews killed in the Holocaust. "It's a lie," Hale responded. "Never happened. It's Hollywood." Finley then tried on another front. "Jesus said there's no difference between Jews and Greeks," he offered.

Responded Hale: "We're not Christians." Finley said he was not bothered by most motorists' indifference, saying it did not indicate support. "Christians just usually like to ignore them," he said. "Christians do not hate."

"What is it?" Hill asked, and the driver responded with a thumbs-up. Some motorists overcame by their emotions pulled into the Hardee's parking lot, either to voice their support or opposition.

One teen pulled up and chatted amicably with Hale. "I want to know where the United Caucasian College Fund is," said the teen, a lanky 18-year-old from Peoria who declined to give his name for fear of retaliation.

"There's black people and then there's n—s," he said, smoking a cigarette as he sat on the hood of his pickup truck. "There's black people who go to work every day like the rest of the people, and there's n—s that sit around and collect welfare."

But another young woman pulled up and politely but skeptically questioned the protesters on their beliefs. A cross dangled from the rearview mirror inside her red Geo, and a fish-shaped ornament containing the name "Jesus" was fastened to the back of her car.

"I'm for everybody," she said, before proceeding to critique white supremacy on religious grounds. Another Christian, Leo Finley,

"You guys suck!" yelled one teenage girl, who was crammed into the back seat of a car with a bunch of friends.

"God created equal, not different," two women called in unison as their car sped by.

One man pulled up to the intersection in his Mitsubishi Gallant, rolled down the window, smiled and made an obscene gesture.

Another young man, who was white, raised his fist and shouted repeatedly, "Black power!"

The protesters only laughed. "You look real African, buddy," Viktor shouted back.

But an even greater number appeared to show support for the protesters' cause.

"Yeah! Woowoo!" shouted one man in a van, honking his horn in support.

"Hey-hey!" yelled another man in a Ford pickup truck.

One couple smiled and gave the group a thumbs up, their child in the back seat of their Chevrolet.
