THE NATURE OF THE JEW by Pontifex Maximus Matt Hale

The fight against the Jew parasite is far more than simply a political, or even religious, fight. It is at its root a biological one, for regardless of whatever political ideology or supposed religious conviction this or that particular Jew embraces, he still remains at his core a parasite among humanity. It is his biology that determines his actions more than anything, and even if the Jew were to somehow consciously be persuaded to believe in a value system completely different than his nature, we would still (many of us with shock and disbelief!) find him engaging in activity in conformance with his nature. As Benjamin Franklin so cogently stated in reference to the Jews, "A leopard cannot change his spots." A Jew cannot fully change what he is; he can only suppress some symptoms and perhaps feel on occasion some contrition for his actions. Some Jews may even seek to expose the nature of his fellow Jews and (due to having some White blood) help the White Cause in the process. These latter Jews, however, must be carefully watched lest their parasitical nature regain the upper hand over whatever contrition they formerly felt.

As our Founder Ben Klassen stated, there simply is "no compromise or negotiating with the Jew." The Jew is a parasite whose sustenance depends upon the fleecing of non-Jews, and therefore, either the Jew will prosper at our expense, or the Jew will perish due to the lack of a host from which to draw his nourishment. Hence the reason why the Jews have always kicked and screamed when their host nations have sought to expel them. They do not want a separate state; they want a state within a state. After all, the "Israeli Experiment", as Israel will soon be called, was not formed so that Jews could have a separate state exclusively their own. Among a number of other reasons, it was formed instead as an international welfare, parasite state, taking advantage of the misplaced charity of the world and the cheap Arab labor surrounding it. While Israel has always been proclaimed as a homeland for the Jews, there have always been far more Jews outside of Israel than within it as many Jews realize that the "pickings" are better elsewhere and there is far more risk to their physical safety inside rather than outside Israel.

It is not the Jewish religion that has made the Jews evil. It is the Jewish Race that created an evil religion--a religion that merely codifies their nature. It is vital to understand this if the Jews are to be understood, and the Jews indeed must be understood in order to be defeated. The Christian religion, with its built in adulation of the Jews, failed to recognize this with the result being that all efforts against the Jews were completely ineffectual. The Christians thought that if they could simply "convert" the Jews, everything would be fine. The reality, of course, was that the Jews simply lied about being converted and resumed as before the business of destroying the culture and civilization of those areas in which they lived. With their focus on the "spiritual" realm rather than the biological and natural realm, the Christians failed to realize that the perniciousness of the Jew doesn't spring from sick spirituality but that the Jews' sick spirituality springs from his biological nature.

It does not matter for our purposes whether the Jew intentionally is the destroyer he is, for the result is the same regardless of his consciousness. Does it, after all, make much difference whether a mosquito is sucking the blood out of your arm to survive or sucks the blood because he likes it? No. What matters is that as long as the Jew is present within our society, he will continue the feverish drive to destroy what we hold dear. He will pervert everything natural and good and turn it into the unnatural and perverted. He turns sex into pornography, pride in womanhood into feminism, worker's rights into communism, a woman's compassion into aid to our racial enemies. He is the great distorter who has been justly prosecuted (not persecuted) for his various acts. What stands between him and his goal of destroying all that which is beautiful is you and I--we who are aware of the mosquito and have the hand to swat them. Through our efforts, the true "judgment day" will come--the day in which the Jews will be rendered harmless for all time. RAHOWA!

Excerpts from World Headquarters Weekly Hotline Message by PM Matt Hale--Bloomington Meeting a Great Success!
(309) 699-0135 October 31, 27AC

The big news item this past week is our holding yet another successful public meeting and one without question the most successful thus far. This meeting was held on Saturday October 28th at the Bloomington Public Library. Over 150 people (including some nonwhites if you wish to construe them as such) came to listen to me speak on why voting in the upcoming sham election is an exercise in futility. Over half of those White people in attendance were supportive of our Cause--or at least were so following the conclusion of my speech. I have always said that if we can get the masses to our meetings, we can win them, and this meeting demonstrated this clearly. The masses must not merely read our message on a computer screen or in a book, but must also hear our message.

Once again, the clowns of the Jewish Defense League played into our hands and showed up to heckle and slander me during my speech. Their conduct was so obnoxious that a White Racial Comrade approached me afterward and told me that he hated Jews now because of their conduct alone. I very much hope that the Jews will continue to take every piece of bait we throw them and show up at our meetings. Their conduct when they do greatly aids us in demonstrating the nature of the eternal Jew poison.

Contrary to the controlled media's version of the meeting, it was a resounding success and I am quite pleased personally with my speech and its effect on our White Racial Comrades. I am proud and grateful that both Nature and experience have given me the gift of public speaking and know that it is most fully my role to speak before ever larger crowds of our people. Indeed, if this were all I did, there is nothing that I would enjoy more.

Remember that the only way to win the people is to meet the people, like it or not, and those who give up on the masses are truly giving up on Victory. We may not necessarily like this, but this is the way it is. Adolf Hitler knew this. George Lincoln Rockwell knew this. I know this. You need to know this too. If nothing else, think of it this way: is it better to stay within our homes and talk to one another about what we obviously already believe in, or better to bring our message to the people who have either been on the fence or against us? The answer is obviously the latter. Nothing is gained in the former instance while in the latter, we have instilled a kernel if not more of resistance to the current order. This is why the Jews come to our meetings--they know that (from their standpoint) there is a real danger if we can reach the White masses with our message and consequently they engage in disruptions of them in a desperate attempt to hinder us. Of course, the reality is that they help us considerably. Should I send these rodents a "thank you" card?

Understand how people think, my Brothers and Sisters. This must be the first prerequisite to reaching them. The masses are herd animals. What does a herd do? They congregate, or meet...RAHOWA!

Concepts of Emotion and Reason
by Rev. Dan Hassett

The concepts of emotion and reason must be comprehended as they are elementary to our knowledge of what tactics to employ. Our emotion is our motor--it is the element of energy within ourselves. The function of our emotions is similar to that of a motor in a vehicle. Our reason is our sense of direction--it is manufactured in our intellect. The functions of our intellect are akin to that of a steering mechanism in a vehicle. A vehicle devoid of its motor will not even move and a vehicle devoid of its steering capabilities will crash. Either deficiency will therefore prevent our success. Our emotion must be guided by our reason to enable us to reach our destination. They must both coexist in a proportionate balance to produce the desired results.

The omnipresent ignorance about the concepts of emotion and reason is the main reason for the impotence of many White Racialists. These concepts manifest themselves in many different ways in various situations. I will cite a couple of commonplace examples to illustrate their application. For example, you get verbally assaulted by an anthropoid. You then react with physical aggression and/or arguing back. As a consequence of your reactions, you either get hurt or go to jail. What good have you done for our Race by getting involved in such a silly incident? In retrospect, it would have been more sensible to ignore them and walk away provided that you were not being physically threatened. That is one conspicuous example of the absence of reason in determining one's actions. As another example, say you possess a complete knowledge of the subject matter but lack the courage, ambition, and energy to promote it. In that case, your intellect and knowledge will remain sterile. That is a prime example of what will transpire with the absence of emotion. Many more examples can be offered, but these will suffice.

All activities are bound to be futile unless we develop a guiding principle to direct our actions. The guiding principle must be in accord with the concepts of emotion and reason as well as the aim itself. This concept can and must be applied to every situation that we may encounter. The guiding principle is how can we best advance the cause of the White Race? Every action we initiate must be measured by that yardstick only! Obviously, acting to vent our emotional frustrations is counterproductive to the Movement. By behaving in such an irrational manner, we are shirking our responsibility to the White Race. Every sincere White Racial Loyalist is a microcosm of the White Racialist Movement in its entirety. We have a paramount obligation to represent the Movement properly and to set a good example for the masses. The effectiveness of our actions must transcend all other criterion in evaluating our activities!

Creator Enterprises

by Rev. Kenneth Molyneaux

In order to move closer towards a Whiter, Brighter World, we need to become enterprising. By starting our own businesses and making our own products, we can destroy the Jewish stranglehold on the finances. The majority of things we currently buy are not produced by our White Brothers and Sisters and nor does the money we spend go to our comrades. This is a situation that can and should be changed in order to further our Race's aims.

Those members of our Race that are loaded with creative talent should use this ability productively. There are a whole host of possibilities from clothing to fresh produce. We can start on a low scale so that we do not need a large amount of capital to manufacture our products. Some Creators have already produced things and I hope that more will do so in the future. There is no limit to the possibilities and perhaps a catalog listing all the items we offer will be available in the future. By trading among ourselves, we keep our money flowing between us with the slimy Jew unable to steal our hard-earned funds.

For those comrades who have the ability, business skill, and means to do so, I would highly recommend starting a business. Our great Founder, Ben Klassen, wisely advised to start working in a business that one enjoys in order to learn and see how things work. With this knowledge, one will be prepared when starting one's own business. Our own companies would be very valuable to our people in providing jobs, offering goods, and offering camaraderie while sustaining our people. Some advisable enterprises would be printing shops to print our literature (from fliers to novels), music companies to produce White music, and television stations to broadcast our message. Of course, these are but a few ideas of what is possible and there are many more that would be productive and profitable. RAHOWA!

Christianity or Creativity--My Choice by Rev. Kevin FitzPatrick

One aspect of the Creativity religion most often misunderstood is that it is not centered on worship of any God or other supernatural being(s), which we, as Creators, realize do not exist. Religion is defined as a cause or set of beliefs pursued with fervor and devotion. Creativity in every way fulfills this definition as our Cause and set of beliefs are set forth in the Holy Books unique to our religion and the fact that to the fulfillment of these religious beliefs, we Creators forever pledge our lives, our sacred honor, and our religious zeal.

Please consider the following statements:

1. An all-powerful God exists.
2. An all-good God exists.
3. Evil exists.

As we know full well that evil does indeed exist (unnecessary suffering, psychotic criminals, tragedy, etc.), then clearly the first two statements cannot also be true as well.

Consider being approached by criminals who demand protection payments or otherwise harm will come to you, when prior to this demand you felt no need for protection from such unseen evils. This is clearly extortion--the same as we Creators view the theory of a God who demands our love and praise or otherwise we are doomed to burn in eternal hellfire, when prior to hearing of this demand we felt no need for protection from such an unseen evil. Infinite punishment for finite sins clearly does not fit the bill of an all-good God.

Were this God all-powerful, then He would know that so many people simply cannot have unconditional faith in a God they have never seen. If, as the Christians say, it takes unwavering faith for God to answer our prayers and show His presence in our lives, then where is this faith to come from prior to His presence being shown and proven to us all? Faith is defined as a firm belief in something for which there is no proof. NO PROOF. Isn't it funny that the Christians say that when good things happen in our lives it is God's will, but when bad things happen, well, He just works in "mysterious ways"?

As an intelligent person, I would never believe unsubstantiated claims that there were leprechauns or elves in a forest if I never saw them for myself, but if they need me to believe in order to avoid a never-ending, searing torture of hellfire (as any good leprechaun or elf certainly would), then they would do for me what they need to for me to believe. We're talking here about scorching fire for eternity--something not to be taken lightly. They would do more than just expect me to fully believe because of writings written by mere men (manipulative, parasitic, power-hungry Jews at that), who in many cases claim to have had "visions" or heard the "voice of God" which if claimed today would very likely be viewed as symptoms of schizophrenia requiring psychotropic medications and the care of a psychiatrist.

I certainly have never had any God speak to me or give me any visions or prophecies, and I have never seen a single miracle. Were there a God who did so, then beyond any doubt I would love and praise Him beyond measure. Am I not worthy of a voice or a vision that would save me from Hell? Are we not, as the Christians say, equally important in the eyes of God? If so, then why speak to the prophets and Jewish scriptwriters of the Bible and not me, to save me from eternal torture, but as it stands per Christianity, I am a heathen, a lost soul, and headed straight to searing brimstone. Forever. What exactly is supposed to feel those flames anyway? We know full well that our living physical bodies that can feel pain no longer do once dead. Revelation 20:14 reads "The lake of fire is the second death." So we are to be dead not once, but twice, and still feel pain?

If the essence of Christianity lies in the firm belief that acceptance of Christ as God's son will spare us from Hell, they why does the Bible tell us that not only the unbelievers are relegated to Hell, but many others as well? For one of several examples in the Bible, Revelation 21:8 reads "But the cowardly, the unbelieving, the vile, the murderers, the sexually immoral, those who practice the magic arts, the idolators and all liars--their place will be the lake of burning sulfur. This is the second death." It seems to me therefore that Hell, per the Bible, is much more difficult to avoid than the Christian preachers want us to believe, and don't forget to "Go, sell everything you have and give it to the poor..." (Mark 10:21) since, as Christ supposedly said in Mark 10:25, "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God." To fully clarify this for those who need to see it in scripture, see Mark 10:24, "Children, how hard it is to enter the kingdom of God" (according to the Bible, these are Christ's own words). How hard indeed, considering there exists no evidence that the "hereafter" is even a reality, while the Christian religion is fully focused on the evasion of Hell--a Hell that is simply a horrible nightmare invented by the Jewish scriptwriters of the Bible to subjugate and control the victims under the fearful (indeed terrifying!) influence of believing in it.

A religion based on the psychological terror of a fictional place is simply not one that I can find it in me to adhere to--ever--but one based on the Eternal Laws of Nature, History, Logic, and Common Sense, as Creativity is, I can and do believe in and dedicate my life to. Forever. RAHOWA!

Creativity Activism...When Are YOU Going to Bring Creativity to Your Area?

Matt Hale, the white racist re-entend of the World Church of the Creator, headquartered in East Peoria, has applied for his law license in Montana. Hale said in a press release that he mailed his application to the state bar for a law license in the state of Montana, Sept. 23. This decision, Hale said, comes months after the United States Supreme Court refused to review Illinois' denial of his law license here.

Racist pamphlets in village linked to local post office box

TUESDAY OCT. 9 27AC

Anti-Semitic fliers written by an Illinois white supremacist

Robert Marchant
The Journal News

Racist and anti-Semitic literature again turned up on the streets of Tarrytown this weekend — coinciding with the Jewish celebration of Rosh Hashana — and the pamphlets for the first time revealed a local connection to a white supremacist group that publishes them.

Tarrytown police received a handful of complaints on Saturday that pamphlets from the World Church of the Creator were scattered around driveways on Croton Avenue and Hillside Place.

The pamphlets listed a post office box in Sleepy Hollow as a mailing address for more information about the World Church of the Creator, the first time a local contact has appeared in a dozen appearances of the pamphlet in the New York metro area over the past year.

no of the Tarrytown police said that the department would find out who the owner of the post office box was during its investigation of the incident.

The bias unit of the Westchester County District Attorney's Office was also contacted.

Though no laws have been broken, police say they want to keep tabs on the organization for informational purposes.

The pamphlets, titled "Facts That the Government and the Media Don't Want You to Know," turned up in another Tarrytown neighborhood in June.

They have also been distributed in Croton-on-Hudson last month, as well as Sleepy Hollow in April, among other locations in New York City and the northern suburbs.

The pamphlets are the work of a white supremacist from Illinois, Matt Hale, whose organization was linked to a shooting rampage in July 1999 that left two people dead, along with the gunman.

The pamphlet attacks blacks, Jews and Hispanics, using scientific jargon and references to mainstream academic sources, some of them false, to lend credibility to its claims.

The number of pamphlets that were scattered around the neighborhood was difficult to determine, police said; since many residents appeared to have simply thrown them out.

At least a dozen pamphlets were passed out.

One local resident, Doug Benson, threw out the copy left on his doorstep after he realized what the pamphlets were about.

"It's kind of brazen," he said yesterday, shaking his head in disbelief. "I don't know what they expect to accomplish, except to rile people up."

The pamphlets have earned official censure from the village.

"While the material in the booklet is protected as free speech under the U.S. Constitution, it is not the kind of discourse we welcome in our community," said Village Administrator Richard Slingerland.

"Any group that wants to try to pit residents and neighbors against each other because of race, color, creed or the way they live, will not find a receptive audience here," Slingerland said.

Protesters plan to oppose Hale visit

BLOOMINGTON — East Peoria white supremacist Matt Hale's intention to speak at the Bloomington Public Library today at 2 p.m. has sparked plans to protest his visit in this community, which has spent five years developing a public campaign against racism.

Matt Kubiak, director of the Bloomington Public Library, said a man identifying himself as one of Hale's supporters reserved the library's Community Room on Aug. 31, scheduling today's event. State law prevents the release of the name of the person who reserved the room.

To counter Hale's message, the McLean County Historical Museum and a number of other civic groups plan to hold a Diversity Celebration at the museum, 200 N. Main St., beginning at 1 p.m., according to Barb Adkins, the city's community affairs specialist.

Hale scheduled return trip to B-N

About 125 people came to the meeting, the topic of which was to ask people to not vote in next week's election. Some heckled the talk, and some shouted at Hale and about 10 followers who accompanied him.

Hale advocates strict racial separation and considers non-racist white people to be traitors to their race. His Nov. 26 program title is "Racial Loyalty or Racial Reason."

Hale, in a prepared announcement, said the Bloomington event was being held regardless of the hecklers and protesters. We gained many new adherents to our cause.

Hale would come to Bloomington-Normal, because we are a very assertive community when it comes to diversity," said Adkins, an organizer of the Racism: Not In Our Town rallies and today's Celebrate Diversity event.

Kubiak had another concern, however. He is of Polish decent and a number of his relatives were displaced and murdered by the Nazis during World War II. Kubiak said he consulted Len Zini, a Peoria attorney who is well versed in library laws.

Zini, Kubiak said, confirmed that because the library serves the community as a "partial public forum," it could not turn Hale away without valid reason.

Protesters gathered for a meeting to discuss the upcoming visit by Matt Hale to the Bloomington Public Library. The meeting was held at the library's executive director's office. Hale's visit is scheduled for Nov. 26.

There is a point where the library's functions, the policy states, and they must not interfere with the library's functions, the policy states.

Mayor checks if Hale can use library

Ordinance may prohibit room's use for religious rallies

BLOOMINGTON — Mayor Judy Markowitz questioned white supremacist Matt Hale's right to use the public library for meetings after hearing that he plans regular appearances in Bloomington.

"I think there may be something in the library board ordinance prohibiting the use of the community room for any kind of rallies dealing with religion or politics," Markowitz said Thursday.

"That is the question the library director is investigating, and we will see," she said.

Hale, an East Peorian and head of the World Church of the Creator, said he will speak on "Racial Loyalty or Racial Treason" at 2 p.m. Nov. 25 at the Bloomington Public Library.

Numerous hecklers attended Hale's speech at the library Oct. 28.

"Our previous meeting in Bloomington was resoundingly successful regardless of the hecklers and the protesters," Hale said.

"We gained many new adherents to our great cause. The meeting on Nov. 25 will be following up on that effort and is sure to bring even more of our beloved people in the Bloomington-Normal area into our church," he said.

"We intend to meet regularly in Bloomington from now on," he said.

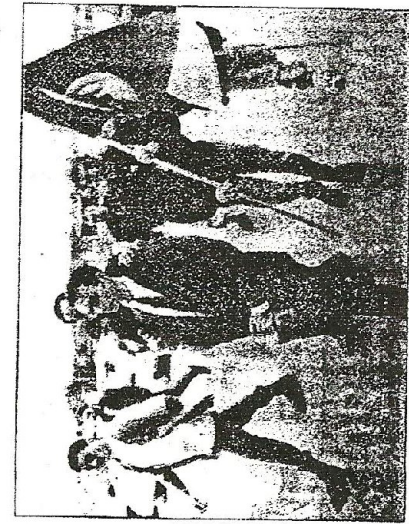

About 100 people turned out for Hale's Oct. 28 speech. At least 20 were believed to be Hale supporters.

On the same day, Bloomington community leaders held a Diversity Celebration at the Old Courthouse Square. People pledged to donate so much money for every minute Hale spoke at the library to be used for diversity outreach efforts.

"I couldn't care less if the anti-racist groups hold another so-called diversity rally during my speech and raise all the money they want," Hale said.

"After all, our opponents really have inexhaustible resources anyway with which to brainwash our children, and whatever money they raise is hardly therefore going to make a difference," he said.

ence, but eventually heckling and challenges from the audience intensified, and Hale began to respond.

"You're a little man with a little mind and no soul," called out Ian Sigel, chairman of the Chicago chapter of the Jewish Defense League.

Hale took exception to having his rhetoric labeled as hate speech. "Is there to resist that which would destroy you?" he said, referring to what he said are efforts to destroy the white race.

Hale said people naturally love their families more than strangers, and the white race is the extension of his family.

Mark Hammer, pastor of St. Luke's Union Church in Bloomington, said Hale's ideas are dangerous because they give disaffected people a false cause to rally around.

As a veteran of the pulpit, Hammer gave the self-styled New Hale a grade of D-minus as a preacher. "He uses intensity and volume, rather than thought," he said. "He's a pretty amateur. Maybe he should take a speech course."

Hammer said Hale lacked charisma, and even his passion seemed forced. As for the heckling, Hammer said Hale appeared to thrive on it and the said they hold Hale accountable for the bi-state shooting spree by Hale disciple Benjamin Smith during the Fourth of July weekend in 1999.

Meanwhile, back at the Old Courthouse — which houses the McLean County Museum of History — hundreds of people crowded around all four levels of the building's rotunda to hold hands and sing "We Are the World."

"It was beautiful," said Barb Adkins, event organizer and spokeswoman for the local tion, a coordinated effort of 22 community organizations, staged the event to counter Saturday's speech by avowed white supremacist Matt Hale, leader of the East Peoria-based World Church of the Creator.

"God of all creation, on this day when hale is being preached in our community, help us to remember you are not about hate and preached against hate," No-reen Ball, lay ministry director for Wesley United Methodist Church, said during the diversity event.

A crowd comprising many backgrounds, including many children, filled the streets for the two-hour celebration, enjoying food from various ethnic groups provided free by local business and civic groups.

Many thought the celebration was a better way to make a statement about Hale's visit than a direct protest.

"A celebration instead of a protest or, rather, a celebration as a form of protest, that seems fine to me," said Kathy Kirk of Normal, who brought her son Hudson, 10, and daughter Ave, 5, to the event.

Hale spoke on the uselessness of voting, especially by white people, because the incentives were not represented. He was interrupted

Kirk said while she wasn't overtly trying to instill values in her children by bringing them to the event, "they'll get it by osmosis."

Rosemary Moews Scarbeary said she initially wanted to oppose Hale by attending his speech but changed her mind and came to the celebration instead.

"My daughter is biracial, and I didn't want my presence to be a witness in that way," Moews Scarbeary said. "I also wanted to hear (15th District congressional candidate) Mike Kelleher sing."

Kelleher was one of several performers who graced the makeshift stage, including the Mount Pisgah Baptist Church Youth Choir, the Illinois State University Guerrilla Theater and the Market and Allin Street Players, among others.

Meanwhile, about 200 yards away at the Bloomington Public Library, a different sort of atmosphere prevailed. About a half-dozen members of the Jewish Defense League showed up there to heckle Hale.

BLOOMINGTON — It was a great day to celebrate diversity in downtown Bloomington on Saturday afternoon, as hundreds enjoyed food and entertainment at the Old Courthouse Square.

He said he is aware of the community's Celebrate Diversity Day activities taking place Saturday — but he plans to ignore them.

Hale's World Church of the Creator has been leading the Twin Cities with fliers that say "trash the political prostitutes." He called the political system corrupt.

"The politicians only really care about being elected," he said. "They care about the money in their pockets. They don't care about the people, especially white people."

Second Amendment exists to overthrow government by force

I recently read the Sept. 25 issue of the Journal Star with its feature on the "Voters Roundtable." While I certainly have no personal animosity towards Myrna Bietz (who incidentally provided piano accompaniment to me 11 years ago for a violin recital), I must say that her views concerning gun control are naive, ignorant and downright dangerous to the few remaining freedoms we have left.

Every "gun law" is an unconstitutional infringement on the right to keep and bear arms. The Second Amendment, regardless of what pacifists and believers in a tra-la-la utopia might like, says that the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed. Therefore, gun laws have been passed in violation of what is supposed to be the supreme law of the land; the Constitution. Every person who is imprisoned for violating a phony gun law has thus been incarcerated unconstitutionally and, therefore, illegally.

The assault on this constitutional right to keep and bear arms by the politicians makes them worse than the very criminals they say they are seeking to stop. The reality, of course, is that the purpose of these gun laws is not to stop the criminals (who after all, aren't in the habit of following laws anyway), but to render you and I subservient to any tyranny that the government imposes.

Our founding fathers did not provide us with the Second Amendment so that we could go hunting, but instead so that we could have the tools necessary to resist tyranny from the government. They mistrusted government deeply and knew that all too often, it is the common people, with their firearms, who are the last line of defense against tyranny. Talk about retaining the right to keep and bear arms so that people can go hunting negates the purpose of the Second Amendment and gives fuel to the fire of the Myrna Bietzs of the world who quite naturally say that eliminating firearm deaths is worth spoiling some plans of the hunters. This misses the point entirely.

Make no mistake about it: we have the Second Amendment so that if necessary, we can overthrow the government by force of arms. This might not be a politically correct thing to say, but it's a fact.

To the question, "When should we give up our firearms?" that some might pose, the answer must be: "When the government gives up theirs!"

Racist leader Hale applies to state bar

Denied in Illinois, World Church head wants to practice law here

By KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN
Missoula State Bureau

HELENA — The leader of an ultra-hardcore white supremacist group, who was denied an Illinois law license because he failed to meet that state's ethical fitness and conduct code, wants to work as a lawyer in Montana.

Matt Hale, a self-described racist and anti-Semite who leads the Church of the Creator, has applied for admission to the state bar here, he'll move to bar of Montana, Illinois officials rejected his request for a law license two years ago, saying Hale's beliefs and actions are in direct contradiction with the conduct required of lawyers.

Hale's group has had several meetings in Montana, including a recent annual gathering about two weeks ago in Superior, which drew about a dozen followers. Hale said Monday that if he's admitted to the bar here, he'll move to Montana full time. The Church of the Creator is founded on the notion that whites are supreme over all races, and Hale does not shy away from the most offensive terms to describe nonwhites. The motto of the Church of the Creator is "rahowa," the first two letters of each word in the term "racial bark war."

After he was shut down in Illinois, Hale lost several court appeals that he based on the First Amendment right to free speech. His quest was backed by such organizations as the American Civil Liberties Union. Hale said he'll continue his legal battle in Montana.

Kent Toole, program director of the Montana Human Rights Network, said Hale is not a fight for free speech. Toole said he believes Hale would fail any test of conduct applied to the legal profession.

"We don't agree that Matt Hale has any constitutional right to practice law," said Toole. "There's nothing about practicing law in the Constitution."

Toole, who monitors Hale's organization and other hate groups, said the Church of the Creator is about more than just release. He said members have a long history of intimidation and "hitting" to intimidate others. "It's not just that he has a bunch of ugly ideas," Toole said of Hale.

Hale, who graduated from Southern Illinois University law school in 1998 and passed the Illinois bar exam, said he has high hopes for getting permission to practice in Montana.

"I am calling upon the state of Montana to simply follow the supreme law of the land: the Constitution of the United States," Hale said in a press release. "If the officials involved do indeed follow the constitution, there is no doubt that I will be admitted to the practice of law in Montana.

"The fate of freedom everywhere will in no small part rest on the choice that Montana makes in this case," Hale continued.

In a telephone interview, Hale said he believes those who review his application here will be friendly to his request. This state also has a moral fitness and conduct code for attorneys.

"Religious beliefs have nothing to do with character and fitness," Hale said.

A man who loves to hate

Matt Hale an articulate warrior in his fight for white supremacy

By MICHAEL GREENWOOD
Hartford Courant

EAST PEORIA, Ill. — At the headquarters of the World Church of the Creator, Matt Hale is hard at work on the white revolution, organizing his soldiers for the final struggle: RAHOWA! Racial Holy War.

Hale's been preaching the gospel of hate for more than a decade and recently extended it via cable access television, confident he will snap people out of their complacency and eventually turn America into a bastion of whiteness.

His vision for the future includes mass deportations of minorities, the execution of interracial couples and strict loyalty to an all-white government.

On the television screen and over the Internet, his stern, angular face takes on a sinister quality. His diatribes evoke Nazi Germany.

But here, amid the rolling cornfields of central Illinois, there's little support for Hale's grand schemes and few people listening.

There is no "church," only a cluttered office on the second floor of his modest home. Except for a few wayward souls, there are no minions. And after one spends a little time with Hale himself, the cultivated image of a messianic leader bent on remaking the world starts to crack.

With a hint of acne still clinging to his 29-year-old face, the high priest, or "Pontifex Maximus," as he calls himself, still lives with his father. Racism is his profession, otherwise, he's unemployed. And in his largely white, largely blue-collar town on the muddy banks of the Illinois River, he's pretty much viewed as a flake.

It's only technology — along with a dash of media savvy and a penchant for self-promotion — that has snatched Hale and his tiny band of bigots from complete obscurity. With the click of a mouse, he casts for converts and spreads his racist vision from coast to coast.

His potential audience is almost unlimited. There is no editing or opposing viewpoints. And it's all done in private.

The World Church exists in cyberspace. It's through the Web that this digital David Duke resurrected an organization that almost vanished before he picked up the mantle in 1996.

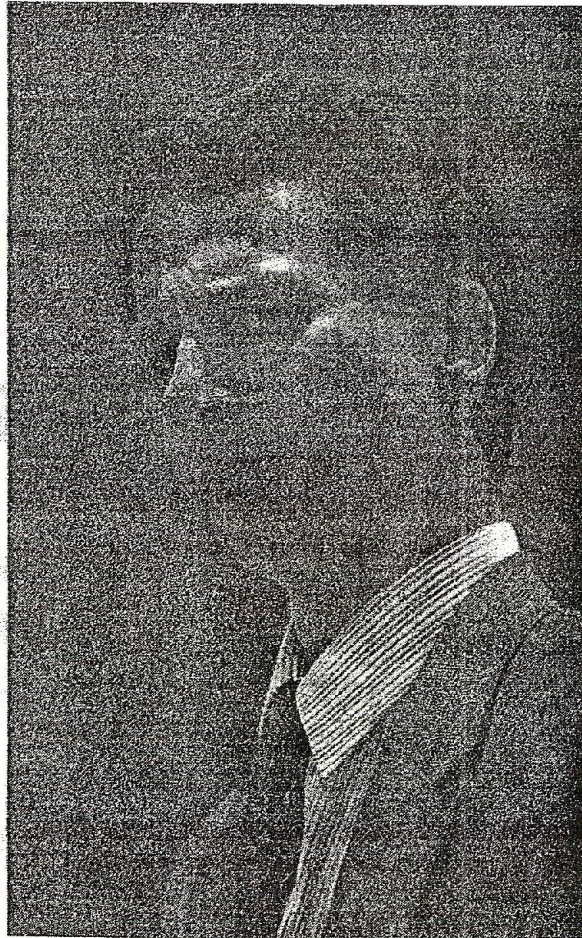

The group has produced one of the slickest pages on the Internet devoted to white supremacy. It is a racist's delight — women with flowing blond hair, crude smears against every group, and even a kid's page, complete with bigoted crossword puzzles.

Unlike most of his competitors in the supremacist movement, Hale has used the medium to reach out to women and youth. Viewers who e-mail Hale receive a prompt response. Teen-agers starting to dabble in racial politics can pick up a copy of the White Man's Bible, or read reams of "facts," the government and media don't want anyone to know.

Hale applauds its effectiveness. "We wouldn't be as known as we are without it," he said. "It's very important. It's allowing us to bring the message to the people."

The actual strength of the World Church is almost impossible to gauge. Hale claims to have several dozen chapters worldwide, including at least five in prisons across the country. He estimates 30,000 people in the United States agree with the teachings, but declines to say how many actually belong.

The Southern Poverty Law Center, which monitors hate groups, said only 203 copies of the church's monthly newsletter, The Struggle, are mailed to members. And many of the chapters that Hale touts as evidence of growing support consist of a

Matt Hale speaks at the University of Montana last October. When he's not discussing race and politics, Hale, from Peoria, Ill., plays the violin and keeps up on current events

"lonely kid" at the post office.

"Essentially it is an Internet group. It doesn't really exist in reality," said Mark Potok, a spokesman for the center. "It's a personality cult centered around Matt Hale."

The World Church isn't a "church" in any sense that most people understand. Members don't believe in God. Hale lumps Jesus in with a host of other international conspiracies. Their creed is simply white superiority. They worship the white race. The church was founded in 1973 by Ben Klassen. He committed suicide 20 years later.

Like Klassen, Hale is the trust of believers. He chuckles as he wipes his polished brown shoes on the Israeli flag that serves as the doormat to his office. The room is painted blood red, the color of his church, and adorned with enough racist propaganda to put Joseph Goebbels at ease.

"We believe the white race is the elite of the world," he says as if he were talking about last night's ball game. "I'm 100 percent confident we are right. We have the most just cause in history."

He talks about a looming civil war in America that will make the first one look like a playground scuffle. And although "the church" publicly disavows violence, some of its members have shattered that commandment.

Last year Benjamin Smith, a zealot for the cause and former confidant of Hale's, went on a shooting rampage in Illinois and neighboring Indiana. By the time it was over, Smith had killed two people and wounded nine. All his victims were minorities. Smith then killed himself.

Hale has summed up the killing spree this way: "As far as we're concerned, the loss is one white man." His first cable show is devoted to Smith and setting the record straight on his killing spree. Twenty-three other shows will follow, including one just completed on Democratic vice presidential nominee Sen. Joseph I. Lieberman of Connecticut and Jewish control of government and the media.

The shows are pretty much alike. With the group's white power flag as a backdrop, Hale stares straight into the camera and ad libs for nearly 30 minutes.

As offensive as he might be, there is another side to Hale that peeks through from time to time. It leaves one wondering how he preaches what he does.

Before he starts droning on about race and politics, Matt Hale seems normal, even likable.

Polite to a fault and dressed like a successful yuppie in his well-pressed suit, starched white shirt and conservative tie, Hale greets visitors to his gray two-story home with a firm handshake and a gentle "hello."

One of the nation's most strident white supremacists is also a strict vegetarian, fueling his 145-pound body with fruit, vegetables and nuts. "I'm a big avocado fan," he volunteers.

And Hale is educated. He earned a bachelor's degree and then a law degree from a state university, though he has not been admitted to the bar because of his views. He's widely read and aware of current events in faraway lands.

When he's not preaching white superiority, Hale plays the violin. He picked up the instrument at age 10 and can do justice to Mozart. It's the only thing he's been doing longer than racism.

How a young boy became a bigot

PEORIA, Ill. — When most of his peers were still reading The Hardy Boys and hanging out at the local mall, Matt Hale, at the tender age of 12, was grappling with the "Rise and Fall of the Third Reich." It was followed up with "Mein Kampf," Adolf Hitler's ponderous tome on race and politics.

"I got into Nietzsche when I was 14," he says with a grin that gives his face a flash of boyishness. He stops just short of labeling himself precocious.

Racist beliefs took root, and by high school Hale was debating his teachers and espousing racial theories that offended most everyone. But it was also getting him attention, and Hale craves attention.

He dove into politics, drawing the media to his front door and spouting beliefs that were off the right-wing scale. He burned Israeli flags in Pekin, a small town near his home, and started referring to other races as "nazi."

His only real regret over the past decade was the volunteer work he did in the early 1990s for the presidential bid of David Duke, a fellow white supremacist and admirer of Hitler.

Duke was just too moderate, Hale had to say things such as "equal rights." It left a bad taste in his mouth that still lingers. He hasn't made the mistake since.

But those who know Hale aren't buying any hints at moderation. He gives lip service to nonviolence because he has to. He has a law degree, and he is smart enough to back down when necessary.

"He's slicker than slick," said Ted Miller, deputy chief of police of Pekin. He has arrested Hale before and has watched his career unfold. He's going to tell you that he doesn't advocate violence. But we all know what has been done. He's definitely an intelligent individual and is dedicated to his mission."

Hale's days in Illinois are probably numbered. He can't practice law here. Montana is the place to be. It's freer there and easier to carry a gun. And there are more like-minded people in the state made famous in recent years by the Freeman and the Unabomber.

Other than his family, there's not much to keep him here. His father, a retired East Peoria policeman, shares the house with Hale. It's been in the family for nearly 100 years. It looks like a bachelor's pad, dimly lit and decorated with a hodgepodge of old furniture that gives it a 1950s feel. His three brothers have all moved on, and his mother left a long time ago after the divorce.

And there is no Mrs. Matt Hale here and no immediate prospects for one.

Hale readily agrees to a request to play his violin. He touches the bow to the strings and plays a mournful tune.

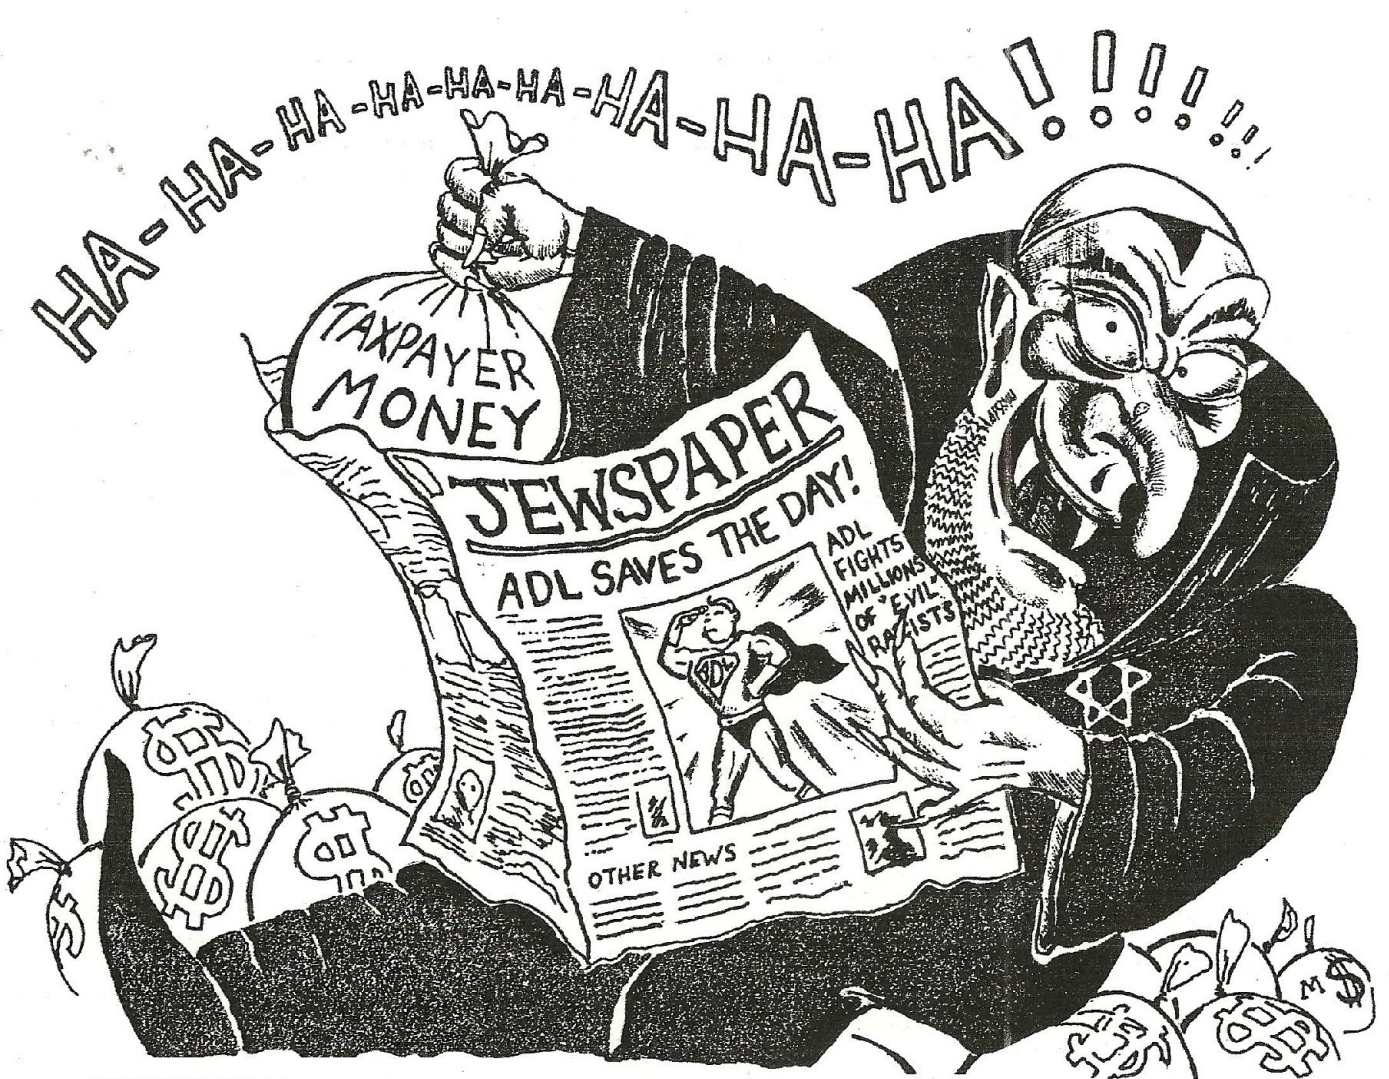

Hale fiddles away, but the sparks from his words and his actions have not yet caused East Peoria to burn, even smolder. Peoria is fine too, just across the river. In fact, his message is lost to almost everybody in America.

He's largely playing to an empty stadium.

But Hale doesn't seem to notice, or he doesn't mind. He's dreaming of future glory for himself and his people.

"I'm a soldier," he said. "I'm in the trenches for my people. I want to make you see what I see. The truth is the truth. I don't care if I'm outnumbered 6 billion to one. I'm going to do what is right even if nobody's with me."

Our Church does not condone or advocate violence or illegality in any way, but demands that our Constitutional right to freedom of religion be unconditionally upheld. As our religious Founder Ben Klassen said, "We have a non-violent religious movement. We have a comprehensive plan as to how to achieve a Whiter and Brighter World. Every step along the way is legal, constitutional and non-violent..." (On the Brink of a Bloody Racial War, p. 375). Pontifex Maximus is Rev. Matt Hale. Articles, artwork, and input are welcome.
